"The Bleeding" by Patricia Windsor starts out fine. Maris is a teenager who wants to escape her mother, and when a chance to be an au pair in England pops up, she takes it. She soon finds out that all is not what it appears to be. This is a depressing book, and includes suicide. The mother of the children seems ignored and put down by her husband.

It's a tragic tale but a story that is fascinating if you are unaware of it and the fact that history is made in this case (in more than one way) just adds to the interest. Very much worth a read - well-written, factually accurate, the first DNA case, and don't you just want to know what a 'bleeding' is...?

Based on a story by Linda Gottlieb and William Darrid. Simmering under the Kansas sun, Crowley Flats looks like a typical prairie town. Now comes the time of the stalker - relentless, violent, deathdealing. Fear trembles like the dust, stirring up naked emotions and lustful passions long held in check.

Quotes from The Bleeding "Blackstone got to his feet and, without thinking, raised the talisman to his lips and kissed the Celtic goddess in thanks for her protection. Perhaps, he thought, God allowed angels and goddesses to share His kingdom so they might shadow the likes of him who constantly sinned through lack of prayer and who harboured doubt about His existence." — 0 likes

The Bleeding by James McGee was a nice diversion read for me. It is Historical Fiction during the early years of the American Republic. The story is told from a native born American that has loyalty to the King and the Mohawk Tribe. This novel is a good stand alone, as I wasn't aware that this is actually the fifth in the series.
